Get Wise, Get Wealthy... and Get On With Your Life

Dear Member,

After 16 hard-fought years in the trenches of Wall Street – as an investment advisor, research analyst and portfolio manager – and another seven writing about financial markets, our Investment Director, Alexander Green, released his first book this week.

If you've yearned for a thorough understanding of the investment philosophy that underpins everything The Oxford Club does – or if you've had trouble trying to explain it to friends or family members – this book is for you.

It's called "The Gone Fishin' Portfolio: Get Wise, Get Wealthy... and Get On With Your Life."

Oxford Club members are likely to recognize the title of the book, which is based in part on one of our Oxford Investment Portfolios. But the book is about so much more, too. It lays out the foundation of the successful, market-beating investment system that Alex created eight years ago when he first became our Investment Director.

A lifetime of investment success and accumulated market wisdom can be found in its pages.

"I've made the dumb mistakes so you don't have to," Alex says unabashedly, admitting that he learned many investing truths the hard way. You can save yourself a lot of trouble – not to mention a boatload of money – by learning from his experiences.

It has always been our contention that every member has the right to create a legacy of wealth, without taking crazy risks or trying to outguess the market.

Nor do you need to turn your money over to "that nice young man at Merrill Lynch," either. As Alex explains in the book, you need only understand what part of the investment process is knowable and unchanging, and what factors can never be known in advance.

"The Gone Fishin' Portfolio" is an unvarnished, no-holds-barred narrative about your money and investing. As True Wealth editor Dr. Steve Sjoggerud writes in the foreword, "This book is different – and rare. It provides a simple but sophisticated strategy that actually works, written in plain English, by a brilliant investor."

Armed with the principles in the book – which form the very foundation of everything we do – you'll be empowered to successfully manage your own money. After all, no one cares more about it than you do.

Louis Basenese
Associate Investment Director

Over, please...

The Cornerstone of Our Investing Philosophy

What's so great about The Gone Fishin' Portfolio?

1. It has beaten the S&P 500 and more than 90% of professional money managers every year.
2. It accomplished this while taking much less risk than being fully invested in stocks.
3. It doesn't require you to pay any brokerage commissions, wrap fees or other major investment costs.
4. It is the only investment approach based on a Nobel Prize-winning investment system.
5. It is so simple it requires less than 20 minutes a year to implement.

The Gone Fishin' Portfolio is conservative in its investment approach. Yet – as you perhaps already know – it has beaten the market every year since its inception. (And when we back-tested through the biggest bear market since The Great Depression, it still beat the market. Not just over time – but every year.) It is one reason why the independent Hulbert Financial Digest ranks us among the handful of best-performing investment letters in the nation.

However, the track record alone doesn't tell you why the portfolio does so well in all market conditions.

The book does.

It goes beyond the portfolio itself and reveals many unspoken truths about investing, starting with Alex's conviction that no one can tell you with any certainty what the economy or the stock market will do next.

Sophisticated investors understand this. But they often shrug their shoulders and say, "you still have to guess."

No, you don't.

Rather than trying to rid the market of uncertainty – something that is clearly not possible – you need to capitalize on uncertainty instead. You need to make it your friend.

Realizing this fundamental truth is "the beginning of investment wisdom," according to Alex.

Embracing Uncertainty

Rather than pretend to have answers to unan-

What the Experts are Saying...

"I know I make consistently good investment decisions. But my experience is, Alex Green is one step ahead of me. How does he do it? I don't know. And it all looks so easy, too... because it is for him."

– Dr. Steve Sjuggerud

Author, Safe Strategies for Financial Freedom

"Sometimes great ideas come in small packages. This is one of them. The Gone Fishin' Portfolio is easy to implement and has beaten the S&P 500 year after year. Simple and elegant, this strategy is an investor's dream come true."

– Dr. Mark Skousen

Author, Investing In One Lesson and EconoPower

"Having known Alex Green for more than 20 years, I can tell you there are few investment advisors with more intelligence, knowledge and integrity. His Gone Fishin' Portfolio is a superb strategy for delivering top-tier investment results. It's smart. It's conservative. It takes very little time. And the returns have been superb. What could be better than that?"

– Michael Masterson

Author, Automatic Wealth: The Six Steps to Financial Independence and Ready, Fire, Aim: Zero to $100 Million in No Time Flat

"In my experience, the more complex an investment strategy is, the more likely it is to blow up. The Gone Fishin' Portfolio is the perfect antidote. It's simple and easy to understand. And it works!"

– Bill Bonner

Author, Financial Reckoning Day and Empire of Debt

swerable questions, Alex concedes what we can't know for certain. And what you can. Then he shows you how to profit regardless of market conditions.

That's what the book is really about. It skips the guesswork and endless analysis – and allows you to focus on the important business of reaching your financial goals. It's about managing your serious money in a serious way.

"Getting it right is the difference between a retirement spent in comfort (or luxury) and spending your golden years counting nickels, worrying whether you'll have enough. The difference could hardly be starker," say Alex.

Best of all, "The Gone Fishin' Portfolio" allows you to reclaim your most precious resource: time. Time is perishable, irreplaceable and, unlike money, cannot be saved.

Once you've put your money to work this way, you'll be able to redirect your time to high-value activities, whether it's work that you enjoy, time spent pursuing your favorite activities, or just relaxing with your friends and families.

In short, "The Gone Fishin' Portfolio" gives you an excellent opportunity to increase your wealth. But it also guarantees you more time to devote to the people and pastimes you love.

Perhaps that is what recommends it most.

Get Wise, Get Wealthy... and Get on with Your Life

In Part I of the book, Getting Wise, Alex examines the challenges you face as an investor. He reviews the fundamental relationship between risk and reward in the financial markets. You'll also get an insider's view of how the investment industry really works.

Getting Wealthy, discussed in Part II, details what is arguably the safest and simplest way to reach your long-term financial goals. Alex also addresses the financial and psychological challenges you're likely to face in the years ahead.

Getting on with Your Life, which is discussed in Part III, means taking your financial destiny into your hands and, at the same time, reclaiming your most precious resource – your time.

The Road to Financial Freedom Starts HERE

Under Investment Director Alexander Green's direction, The Oxford Club's portfolios have beaten the Wilshire 5000 Index by more than a 3-to-1 margin.

In his new book, The Gone Fishin' Portfolio: Get Wise, Get Wealthy... and Get On With Your Life, Alex shows you exactly how he did it. And empowers you to successfully manage your own money.

The book shows you how to turn $100,000 into $1.3 million minus much of the stock market's risk... how to earn an extra 2% every year by minimizing your portfolio's tax burden... how to be certain to "buy low" and "sell high" every time... how to reduce your investment costs and squeeze the market for an extra 2% every year...

Discovering the Laws of Life

by Alexander Green, Investment Director, The Oxford Club

Alexander Green

In 1985, I began working with an international money management firm in Winter Park, Florida.

Although I was young and wet behind the ears, I soon discovered I had “the Midas touch.” When it came to investing, everything I touched turned into a muffler.

I fooled around with options and futures. Got burned with micro-caps and junior gold-mining companies. Tried all sorts of dubious trading strategies with equally dubious results.

My more-experienced colleagues had plenty of investment opinions they were eager to share with me. Most, I learned, were worth about what I paid for them.

Things might never have turned around for me had I not become a devotee of investment legend John Templeton.

Templeton died on July 8 at the age of 95. Today the world is a lesser place.

Few American success stories can rival this one...

Templeton was born in Winchester, Tennessee in 1912 and was the first from his small farming town to attend college: Yale University.

However, with his family squeezed by the Depression, it appeared his tuition and board could not be paid. Yet, always a little sharper than his contemporaries, Templeton made up the shortfall with his dormitory poker winnings.

He graduated from Yale in 1934, winning a Rhodes Scholarship to Oxford University where he received a masters degree in law.

When war broke out in Europe in 1939, the stock market tanked. Templeton borrowed $10,000 and bought 100 shares each in 104 companies whose shares were trading at $1 or less. Four of them became worthless. He locked in dramatic gains in the others.

The following year he bought a small investment firm that became the foundation of his investment empire. In the years that followed, he launched and managed some of the world’s largest and most successful international mutual funds. Almost single-handedly, he pioneered the art of global investing, avidly seeking out the world’s most promising investment opportunities wherever they resided.

In the 1950s, for example, he poured shareholders’ money into the Tokyo stock market, buying then-obscure companies like Hitachi and Fuji. With the wounds of World War II still fresh, investing in Japan was about as popular with Americans then as the idea of funding the Taliban is today. But as this battered economy was rebuilt, he earned outsized returns for his investors.

This is rarer than you might imagine. Each year, more than three-quarters of all equity fund managers fail to beat the market. Templeton did it regularly – and he did it for decades.

$10,000 invested in the S&P 500 fifty-four years ago, with dividends reinvested, would have turned into $2.8 million. Not bad. But the same amount invested in his flagship Templeton Growth Fund would have grown to $10.7 million.

During his long career, Templeton earned a reputation as one of the world’s undisputed money masters. Forbes magazine once described him as “one of the handful of true investment greats in a field crowded with mediocrity and bloated reputations.”

In 1999, Money Magazine referred to him as “arguably the greatest global stock picker of the century.”

He sold his Templeton funds to the Franklin Group for $440 million in 1992. But he remained an active investor well into his nineties.

At the height of the Internet bubble, for instance, Templeton sold short dozens of young technology companies just before their shares came out of “lock-up,” the six-month cooling off period following an IPO. He made over $80 million in a matter of weeks. Years later he still referred to it as “the easiest money I ever made.”

Templeton knew what it meant to be a true contrarian. “To buy when others are despondently selling and to sell when others are avidly buying requires the greatest fortitude,” he said, “and pays the greatest reward.”

Over the years, Templeton’s money management skills and uncommon sense helped thousands of investors reach their investment goals. In the process, he became one of the world’s wealthiest men himself.

However, his investment acumen was only one reason I admired him. Another was his philosophy of life.

Templeton was a great believer that true wealth doesn’t come from accumulating money or things, but from fulfilling a purpose outside ourselves, whether that’s exercising our talents, raising our kids to be happy, productive adults, or contributing to our communities in some meaningful way.

As Templeton was fond of saying, “Happiness pursued eludes, happiness given returns.”

He wrote or edited 10 books on spiritual development. He endowed a business and management school, Templeton College, at Oxford. In 1987, Queen Elizabeth II knighted him for his philanthropy.

Twenty-one years ago, he established The John Templeton Foundation – with a current endowment of $1.5 billion – and created the world’s richest annual award, the $1.6 million Templeton Prize for new discoveries in the realm of the human spirit.

For Templeton, it was not enough to dominate the worlds of investing and philanthropy. He wanted to make an impact on the world of ideas. And his overriding goal was to reconcile the diverse and often conflicting worlds of science, philosophy and religion.

Today, the Templeton Foundation gives out more than $70 million annually for academic research in

When Other Stocks Tank... Shadow Stocks Soar

In these crazy markets, there's one thing that's got us talking right now – "Shadow Stocks."

Most investors know them as exchange-traded funds or ETFs. But we call them Shadow Stocks because they "shadow" the performance of a particular market, index or sector.

"Fact is, not every country in the world is being hit by the credit crunch," says Horacio Márquez, who created the Shadow Stock strategy. "With Shadow Stocks, you can play every rising economy... every hot sector... even every rising currency. And since you're not dependent on one single company for profits, you reduce your risk in a major way."

"What's more," says Horacio, "is that these Shadow Stocks offer extra protection in down markets... They have incredibly low minimums... And they offer some peace of mind in investing."

This strategy has already handed investors some serious gains, like the 903% returns on the Malaysian boom... or the 346% on China, for instance.

Even better, the Shadow Stock strategy keeps you from getting scorched if one stock turns turtle.

For more information about The Shadow Stock Trader, call our VIP trading services at 888.570.9830 or 410.454.0498. Oxford Club members who mention priority code XV738 will receive an extra month at no extra charge. 📞 such diverse fields as theoretical physics, cosmology, evolutionary biology and cognitive science.

"No human has yet grasped 1% of what can be known about spiritual realities," insisted Templeton. His foundation exists to promote character development, ethical living and greater spiritual understanding.

As he told BusinessWeek in 2005, "I grew up Presbyterian. Presbyterians thought the Methodists were wrong. Catholics thought all Protestants were wrong. The Jews thought the Christians were wrong. So, what I'm financing is humility. I want people to realize that you shouldn't think you know it all."

In his 1994 book "Discovering the Laws of Life," Templeton argued that the laws of human behavior operate nearly as predictably as the laws of science. The exercise of truthfulness, reliability, perseverance, forgiveness, gratitude, tolerance, reverence, humility and compassion will almost certainly attract good things in your life, just as surely as their opposites bring trouble and misery.

Templeton wanted us to know this. He made it his mission. "I'm only going to be on this planet once, and for a short time," he said. "What can I do with my life that will lead to permanent benefits?"

Templeton knew a great deal about how to make money, how to invest it and how to give it away. But he also understood deeper realities.

In his book "The Templeton Plan," he quotes 19th century abolitionist and social reformer Henry Ward Beecher:

"No man can tell whether he is rich or poor by turning to his ledger. It is the heart that makes a man rich. He is rich according to what he is, not according to what he has."

Sadly, John Templeton is dead. Long live John Templeton. 📞

China Bans USA from the "World's Greatest Agriculture Play"

– Source: U.S. Department of Agriculture

But our experts just uncovered the one secret "loophole" that could hand you 1,166% gains...

China has 20% of the global population but only 7% of the world's farmable land. That means there's not enough farmland to feed 845 million Chinese people!

The government has plans to more than quadruple its spending on agriculture technology by 2010.

The money is heading straight toward a handful of companies that are developing "next generation" seeds that will dramatically increase grain yield.

But, just weeks ago, China's State Council quietly approved the "Industrial Catalog for Foreign Investment." This restricts Americans from owning seed development and production businesses in China... and all of the profits they are about to reap.

Our researchers just uncovered a "loophole" in China's new law. It will allow U.S. investors to sidestep the ban, safely and legally, for potentially enormous gains.

We've included this opportunity in our brand new report Profit from the World's Dawning Agriboom. All together, our analysts narrowed it down to five top plays on the biggest moneymaking trend in the world today.
